Dear Rema Marketing Member

Following his election victory, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu spoke at length with Fox News host Megyn Kelly, and with President Obama, but there's no sign that Netanyahu has heard from Hillary Clinton, who is expected to announce soon that she will run for U.S. president. This stands in stark contrast to several Republicans contemplating presidential bids who rushed to congratulate Netanyahu right after his "against all odds" win for his Likud Party.

So, why, as the leading Democratic presidential possibility, has she not reached out to Netanyahu? Perhaps it's to solidify her support from the Democratic Party, which has grown increasingly unsympathetic to Israel—influenced by President Obama and what The New York Times has called his "poisonous relationship" with Netanyahu. Clinton has called Netanyahu a "complicated figure" and admitted that, as secretary of state, "I was often the designated yeller," browbeating Netanyahu as she represented the Obama administration's insistence that Netanyahu make concessions to Israel's enemies.

The Republican Party and its presumptive presidential candidates stand squarely behind Netanyahu and his efforts to keep Israel safe. But according to Alon Pinkas, who was Israel's consul general in New York when Mrs. Clinton was New York's U.S. senator, "Her relationship with [Netanyahu] is very bad, just not as toxic as Obama's."

Clinton's history with Netanyahu includes, as MSNBC.com pointed out that, "...longtime [Hillary] Clinton message guru Paul Begala went to Israel to help Netanyahu's rival, and several strategists who worked for Barack Obama and could potentially join a Clinton campaign—led by field organizer Jeremy Bird—are working with a nonprofit that opposes Netanyahu. Clinton's longtime pollster, Stan Greenberg, has worked for the opposition Labor Party in the past as well."

All of these issues are important for understanding how the Israeli-US relationship will change over the next 4-8 years. For many the removal of Netanyahu from office would have paved the way for some incredible changes in the middle east peace process. Instead his comeback victory has jeopardized the plans of the Obama office and has risked plunging the middle east into another 4 years of chaos. Should Clinton win the presidential race in 2016 then it could possibly mean further alienation of Israel by her greatest ally.

What does this mean from a biblical perspective? What about the fact that Israel is presently in a state of spiritual blindness? With the gospel of the Bible preached by end time prophecy ministries sometimes as if its an Anti-Arab philosophy, How does God himself show that there is hope for the future destiny of the Arab nations?

Liking to bring you things from a completely different perspective to what you may always hear.

ISRAEL, OBAMA AND THE FUTURE OF THE ARABS

DAVID AND GOLIATH 2015

The world is shocked, and many disappointed, that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has been re-elected despite attempts to discredit him in the media. Israel is moving away from a two state solution a viable reality, ensuring Jerusalem remains the undivided capital, and Judea and Samaria are settled with God's people, in accordance with the word of God.

Last week saw the re-election of Israel's Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu. Haaretz, Israel's leftist newspaper ran the headline "Netanyahu's magic act" and had the following to say:

No one expected this election's startling drama; certainly no one envisioned the numbers that have emerged. Not the pollsters, who need to thoroughly reexamine their conclusions, not the polished political players who painted a completely contradictory reality from the one that arose Wednesday morning. Not even the veteran analysts could translate their experience and seniority into more accurate figures. The truth is that not even sworn optimists among Likud supporters could have predicted the election results. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu can say Wednesday morning what Menachem Begin said when he rose from his sickbed on the eve of his surprising 1977 election victory: I have been resurrected.

Netanyahu has undergone a massive media assault as Haaretz conceded:

This amazing achievement is mainly a personal one for Netanyahu. He endured massive attacks in the press in recent months and not only survived them, but apparently was boosted by them.

To the world Netanyahu's victory is magic because it was not expected, especially with all the negative media he was receiving. Obama certainly didn't want him to win.

DIVINE CONTROL DESPITE BLINDNESS

Unlike many other bible prophecy ministries even though we clearly know from scripture the importance of Israel in God's prophetic time clock, we are also not ignorant to the fact that Israel is presently in a state of spiritual blindness. This is the very reason why God is presently using the gentiles as his vehicle for world evangelism.

This spiritual blindness in Israel is one of the reasons why we have situations where leaders like Netanyahu are admitted members of masonic lodges. Netanyahu has publicly stated (see the Israeli publication Shishi, Spring 1994) that he was initiated into the Masonic Lodge while in the United States. Many Israeli judges and religious figures are Masons. And the Rothschild-supported Hebrew University in Israel has erected an Egyptian obelisk, symbol of Freemasonry, in its courtyard, and inside the new Israeli Supreme Court building is a law library architecturally designed in the shape of an Egyptian pyramid.

The rise of Masons to political power in Israel dates back to 1948 and to Israel's founding as a modern-day nation. David Ben-Gurion, its first Prime Minister, was both a Mason and an avowed Marxist-Leninist and Communist. Since that time, every single Prime Minister has been a high-level Mason, including Golda Meier, who was a member of the women's organization, the Co-Masons."

Despite this state of spiritual blindness the nation of Israel still plays a powerful role in the prophetic calendar. What the world and its politicians, media "spin doctors" and public opinion manipulators fail to understand is a fundamental biblical principle.

ISRAEL, OBAMA AND THE FUTURE OF THE ARABS

“This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.” (Daniel 4:17)

While forces of mankind go through all kinds of contortions to swing power into their hands, the angels are at work. When God decrees the path of human history, especially regarding Israel, mankind is powerless to prevent his will being accomplished:

“So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: It shall not return unto me void, But it shall accomplish that which I please, And it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.” (Isaiah 55:11)

It is the angels that are the king makers, not the media, not the opinion polls, not the politicians.

“...They are the eyes of the LORD, which run to and fro through the whole earth.” (Zechariah 4:10)

FORMING A GOVERNMENT

The Jerusalem Post reported voter turnout was the highest since 1999.

After the polls closed on Tuesday night in the election for the 20th Knesset, the Central Elections Committee reported voter turnout at 71.8 percent, the highest turnout since 1999 and 4.1% more than the last election in 2013. As exit polls came in Netanyahu declared victory to his supports at his election night headquarters:

“Against all odds, we achieved a great victory for the Likud, I am proud of the people of Israel, who in the moment of truth knew how to distinguish between what is important and what is peripheral, and to insist on what is important.”

Haaretz reported:

Netanyahu will be prime minister for the fourth time, the third time in a row. Only David Ben-Gurion accomplished this before him, and if Netanyahu serves a full term he will surpass Ben-Gurion as the country's longest running premier.

However, forming a government in Israel is not as easy as wining the most seats in the election. There are 120 seats in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, and the one to be successful will have to cobble a government together from the different fractured factions that make up the political landscape. Canada's National Post reported,

“With nearly all votes counted, Likud appeared to have earned 30 of parliament's 120 seats and was in a position to build with relative ease a coalition government with its nationalist, religious and ultra-Orthodox Jewish allies.”

Nothing is certain in Israel. When the Kadima party, headed by Tzipi Livni won the 2009 election with 28 seats, it failed to form a coalition and Likud ended up being the ruling party lead by Netanyahu.

The Jerusalem Post reported:

The premier said that he had already spoken with the heads of parties that he plans to invite into his coalition, including Bayit Yehudi chief Naftali Bennett, Kulanu's Moshe Kahlon, Yisrael Beytenu head Avigdor Liberman, Shas leader Aryeh Deri, and United Torah Judaism representatives Yaakov Litzman and Moshe Gafni. The prime minister plans to immediately begin forming a government in order to complete the task within two to three weeks," he said.

A STEP TO THE RIGHT

While we wait to see the political alliance that will be sewn together, what is perhaps the most significant in this election is the swing toward the right by the Prime Minister to secure his return to power. Arutz Sheva reported,

Netanyahu... vowed not to allow a Palestinian state to be founded in Israel during his watch, as opposed to Labor head Yitzhak Herzog, who previously revealed he intended to divide Jerusalem in establishing such a state.

Netanyahu told Arutz Sheva that he had changed his position from the 2009 Bar Ilan speech, in which he declared support for establishing a Palestinian state. Netanyahu cited a change in the realities of the Middle East as being behind his shift.

Netanyahu's announcement of no longer supporting the establishment of a two-state solution came on Monday night, two days before the election. This move, whatever political motives may have prompted it, starts a new era in Israeli politics if Netanyahu forms a government.

Canada's National Post reported:

Netanyahu, who already has a testy relationship with President Barack Obama, took a sharp turn to the right in the final days of the campaign, staking out a series of hard-line positions that will put him on a collision course with much of the international community.

In a dramatic policy reversal, he said he now opposes the creation of a Palestinian state — a key policy goal of the White House and the international community. He also promised to expand construction in Jewish areas of east Jerusalem, the section of the city claimed by the Palestinians as their capital.

Many Israeli governments have toyed with the idea of disengagement over the years with the Kadima party, led by the now disgraced Ehud Olmert, pulling out of the Gush Katif block, in a disastrous attempt to sell land for peace. The two-state solution is completely unworkable, but has been the only option "imposed" by outside forces such as Europe and America as the roadmap forward. It has proven to be a roadmap to a dead-end, and now Netanyahu will have to visibly take Israel on a new path. What that path looks like remains to be seen.

Netanyahu in interview with MSNBC

In the days immediately following the election Netanyahu clarified his position in an interview with MSNBC's Andrea Mitchell:

"I haven't changed my policy. I don't want a one-state solution. I want a sustainable, peaceful two-state solution, but for that circumstances have to change."

Mitchell questioned Netanyahu:

"But you were re-elected on a mandate, certainly Israeli voters, your supporters, believe you were re-elected on a mandate against a two state solution. That is the way the White house is interpreting. They are strongly considering not blocking a vote for statehood for Palestinians."

His response was forthright:

"Well first of all, that state would become a terrorist state. So we need the conditions of recognition of a Jewish state and real security in order to have a realistic two state solution."

OBAMA'S REACTION

Obama's reaction is concerning for many. In an article entitled, "White House 'rethinking' Israel ties, peace process rules", Neil Macdonald of CBC news had the following to say:

Obama spokesman John Earnest

Repeatedly, President Obama's aptly-named spokesman, Josh Earnest, told reporters Thursday the U.S. is "rethinking" and "re-evaluating," and "reconsidering" its decades-long, unwavering support of a negotiated solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The days of Washington automatically supporting Israel at the UN, striving to protect it from international isolation may be over: "That foundation has been eroded," said Earnest. "It means that our policy decisions need to be reconsidered." And the president's spokesman was happy to provide everyone with the reason for America's change of heart: Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's pre-election declaration earlier this week that shattered, finally, the idea of "the peace process." I use those quotation marks deliberately. The peace process has been a fiction for many years, if it was ever real at all. But it was a fiction nearly everyone had an interest in perpetuating: negotiations leading to "two states, living side by side in peace and security."

ISRAEL, OBAMA AND THE FUTURE OF THE ARABS

For the record, Earnest repeated America's abiding support for that ultimate objective Thursday. But, he added, "now our ally in these talks has said that they are no longer committed to that solution."

President Barack Obama's supposed congratulatory call to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, two days after the Likud leader triumphed in Israel's elections, was actually a bitter 30-minute conversation, Israel's two main TV news stations reported.

Quoting unnamed Israeli sources, they said the president made clear he didn't believe Netanyahu was genuinely supportive of a two-state solution to the Palestinian conflict, and that he indicated that the US would no longer automatically support Israel at the United Nations.

According to a Channel 10 read out on the call, indeed, Obama left Netanyahu with "the impression that he intends to abandon Israel at the UN."

The United States has actually been considering a reevaluation of ties with Israel, including its automatic support for the Jewish state at the United Nations Security Council, for at least four months, the Israeli sources also told Channel 2. Although the White House claims the reassessment was prompted by Netanyahu's remarks on Monday in which he rejected the establishment of a Palestinian state — and which he walked back Thursday — that is not the case, according to the officials.

The threat to reassess relations was reported widely and, according to the TV reports, was issued directly to Netanyahu on Thursday by Obama in the call. During the 30-minute conversation, described as "difficult" by Channel 2, Obama made clear to the prime minister that the US was reconsidering its support for Israel at the UN as well as its approach to Israeli-Palestinian peace in light of Netanyahu's pre-election comments rejecting the establishment of a Palestinian state.

Channel 10 also said Netanyahu was adamant about keeping his ambassador to the US, Ron Dermer, in the job despite heavy American criticism.

Netanyahu backtracked on his no-to-Palestine remark earlier, saying he still supported a sustainable, peaceful two-state solution, but the White House swiftly dismissed his new, more moderate comments. Asked why the White House was not taking Netanyahu at his word, White House spokesman Josh Earnest retorted, "Well I guess the question is: Which one?" Earnest said the Obama administration did take Netanyahu at his word — and understood that the prime minister does not envision a Palestinian state being established during his term in office. Earnest said

"The divergent comments of the prime minister legitimately call into question his commitment to this policy principle and his lack of commitment to what has been the foundation of our policy-making in the region,...Netanyahu had prompted questions about his "true view" on the two-state solution"

Earnest said the administration has not decided what a reassessment in policy might mean. But he noted that in the past, the US has regularly opposed UN resolutions to create a Palestinian state by arguing that such a two-state arrangement should be negotiated between the parties. "What has now changed is that our ally in those conversations, Israel, has indicated that they are not committed to that approach anymore," Earnest said.

The Channel 2 report said the US, in the least drastic scenario, might now refrain from vetoing resolutions relating to settlement building and Palestinian statehood. In a more drastic scenario, it might engage in drafting and support resolutions setting out the parameters for a Palestinian state, based on the 1967 lines and with a divided Jerusalem. In a still worse scenario, deemed unlikely, it might support sanctions against Israel for failure to comply with such resolutions.

ISRAEL, OBAMA AND THE FUTURE OF THE ARABS

The loss of American support, while seemingly catastrophic may be necessary as a “coming of age” step for the state of Israel. It has found itself increasingly moving to quiet diplomatic relationships with Arab states with whom it shares common enemies such as Saudi Arabia. The Center for Research on Globalization posted an article on Thursday,

“A recent report by an Israeli TV station revealed that Saudi Arabia would allow Israeli jets to use its airspace to attack Iran, demonstrating the clandestine strategic alliance between Saudi Arabia and Israel. As the Times of Israel reported in an article titled: Saudis ‘would let Israeli jets use their air space to attack Iran’:

“The Saudis have declared their readiness for the Israeli Air Force to overfly Saudi air space en route to attack Iran if an attack is necessary,” the TV report [from Channel 2] said. All that they ask is “some kind of progress” on the Palestinian issue. Being able to use Saudi airspace would allow Israeli planes a shortcut to reach Iran without having to fly around the Persian Gulf, taking up precious time and fuel.”

We know relationships between Israel and Saudi Arabia must improve as the prophet Ezekiel lists Saudi Arabia amongst the list of those who protest in the latter days:

“Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?” (Ezekiel 38:13)

Saudi Arabia and Yemen contain the area of ancient Sheba. Once again, the angels are at work, moving the pieces on the chessboard in accordance with the plan laid out in the ancient prophecies.

THE PROPHETIC END GAME

Regardless of Obama’s protests, we are told the end of the story in the prophets. Israel will be firmly planted in Jerusalem, Judea and Samaria – the mountains of Israel. This is sure and firm, because the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. It is against these areas that the forces of the Gentiles will come in the latter days, and be destroyed on the mountains of Israel when Messiah intervenes and re-establishes the kingdom of Israel.

The prophet Zechariah records the invasion, temporary success and then destruction of these nations:

“Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, And thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; And the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; And half of the city shall go forth into captivity, And the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, As when he fought in the day of battle.” (Zechariah 14:1–3)

The prophet Joel also records the same:

“For, behold, in those days, and in that time, When I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, And will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, And will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, Whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land.” (Joel 3:1–2)

ISRAEL, OBAMA AND THE FUTURE OF THE ARABS

The prophet Ezekiel pinpoints the mountains of Israel as the flashpoint:

“After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them. Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.” (Ezekiel 38:8–9)

This is not a successful campaign, but a resounding final defeat when God will sanctify himself before all nations:

“And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.” (Ezekiel 38:16)

GODS BLESSING: BOTH ISRAEL AND ARABS

Sometimes biblical prophecy could be perceived to be Anti-Arab because of its pro Israel stance yet amazingly God prophesied that it wouldn't just be Israel that would be blessed but also the Arab nations.

This is an important fact because when it comes to the evangelism of the Arab nations it is important for them to realize that they are also prophetically blessed rather than just the scourge of Israel.

The Bible prophesies how in the last days despite Gods judgement on the Arab nations through what many believe to be the Psalms 83 war and the Ezekiel 38 war, that they will come to a full knowledge of him.

Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the LORD shall rise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles (nations) shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the flocks of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. The multitudes of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense; and they shall show forth the praises of the LORD. All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory. Isaiah 60:1-7

Midian, Ephah, Kedar and Nebaioth are all ancient references to Arab nations. The future for the Arab nations is thus not all bleak. They must suffer for their sins just as the Jewish people will suffer. And, like the Jews, a remnant of the Arabs will emerge from their suffering with their hearts turned to the one and only true God (Jeremiah 12:14-17).

Thus says the Lord: “Against all My evil neighbors who touch the inheritance which I have caused My people Israel to inherit—behold, I will pluck them out of their land and pluck out the house of Judah from among them. Then it shall be, after I have plucked them out, that I will return and have compassion on them and bring them back, everyone to his heritage and everyone to his land. And it shall be, if they will learn carefully the ways of My people, to swear by My name, ‘As the Lord lives,’ as they taught My people to swear by Baal, then they shall be established in the midst of My people. But if they do not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation,” says the Lord.

The most remarkable prophecy concerning the future salvation of an Arab remnant is contained in Isaiah 19:16-25. Isaiah says that when the Lord strikes Egypt and Assyria, they will turn to Him and He will have compassion on them and "heal them." Isaiah then presents an incredible picture of Egypt, Assyria and Israel living together in peace, worshiping the same God!

Another remarkable prophecy concerns the Arabs who will be living in the land of Israel after the Lord returns. This prophecy relates to the fact that the territory of Israel will be greatly expanded when Jesus returns, incorporating many of the Arab nations that exist today. (The considerably expanded borders of Israel during the Millennium are detailed in Ezekiel 47:15-20.) Amazingly, Ezekiel says that the Arabs living in Israel at that time will be "allotted an inheritance" of the land together with the tribes of Israel! (See Ezekiel 47:21-23 and Isaiah 14:1)

So in closing it becomes clear that the only lasting peace that will come to the middle east is when the prince of peace himself returns to earth to establish his messianic kingdom. Come quickly Yeshua.
